The Friendly Critic

When Jenks returned to the office after a visit to the tonsorial parlor he was in a happy frame of mind. For two weeks he had been urged to get his hair cut. The entreaties finally took the form of a command and it really looked as though there might be personal damage if Jenks didn't acquiesce and let the barber trim the mat down to reasonable proportions.

"They will go into ecstasies of delight now, I dare say," muttered Jenks. "The've won. The hair is cut and they can see for themselves."

"Jenks, your intentions were fine," the head bookkeeper remarked, "but in the name of Mike, who is your barber?"

"One of the best in town," Jenks replied. "He charges 35 cents for his haircuts, and he has had a world of experience."

"Why didn't he finish the job?" the credit man asked.

"He gave me a haircut, didn't he?" Jenks replied, doggedly.

"There is no doubt that he started something," the head bookkeeper broke in. "Was he in a hurry?"

"No, he wasn't in a hurry."

"The haircut appears all right to me," the credit man's stenographer interrupted, "except that the sides don't balance."

"Why don't they balance?" Jenks asked.

"The right side is longer than the left side."

"The sides are all right," the head bookkeeper broke in.

"Indeed," Jenks retorted. "I was under the impression that one of them was left."

"I mean that the sides are even," the head bookkeeper returned. "They might appear to be uneven, but that's an optical illusion. You kind of hang down on one side, anyway."

"I note that the barber shaved the back of your neck," the credit man said.

"Is that what you call it?" the stenographer asked. "I thought that he had shaved the back of his head."

"You know I appreciate these criticisms," Jenks said, "but you have my permission to saw off at any time. The haircut suits me."

"That's because you feel it, and don't see it."

"I can look at it if I want to," exclaimed Jenks.

"But don't do it, old man; for the peace of your mind, don't do it. Think of us—we have to look at it."

"In New York, you know," the credit man resumed, "a first class barber never shaves a man's neck unless he has a Hick in the chair and wants to entertain the other barbers. Why, any man who would walk down Broadway with his neck shaved would be arrested for inciting a riot."

When the noon hour arrived, Jenks sneaked over to the barber shop and began a cross-examination.

"What do you think of this haircut?"

"A fine haircut," the barber said.

"Is it cut even?"

"I belong to the union; you don't think I'd cut it uneven, do you?"

"Do you think you should have shaved that neck?"

"Shaved your neck? What did you want me to do—cut your hair and leave a bunch of corn silks on the back of your neck for the cows to play with?"

"I never thought of that, but the gang over there says they don't shave 'em in New York."

"Don't worry about the way they do things in New York. Let me tell you something (the barber grew confidential and spoke in whispered tones) the ginks around here that tell you about the way they do things in New York never saw New York except on the railroad map. They get their style charts from De Soto, Mo. Forget it."

"That's an example of the power of suggestion," the barber remarked, after Jenks had departed. "Them same guys, you know, make well-meaning citizens throw away new five-dollar hats. Ever have a crowd of 'em diagnose a boil on the back of your neck? They'll have you thinking that the boil's going to break on the inside and cause death by blood poisoning before you can telephone the police. On the level, they do."

"What's one man's get-rich-quick scheme," said Uncle Eben, "is often a get-poor-sudden scheme for a whole lot of folks."

"Is he a good artist?" She glanced at him with petulant disdain. "He is a clever artist," she answered, pityingly; "no artists are good."—Life.

A Dream of Days.

The month rises before me like a dream.

I see three days of sane and safe quietness, albeit of stealthy preparation.

I see one day of wild and unbridled tumult.

Then there pass before me twenty-seven days, each bearing in its arms billiments and bandages and surgeons' bills.

"What are you?" I call to them.

"We," they answer, "are the and-so-fourth of July."

Not Retiring.

"Your daughter seems to have a retiring disposition," says the caller.

"One hardly ever sees her anywhere, and I understand she sits in her room nearly all the time, reading."

"She does so, mum," answers the mother. "But retiring disposition."

Laws, many's the time, 'was past midnight, I've fair had to tear the book out of her hands and take the lamp away to make her go to bed. No, she isn't what you'd rightly call a retiring disposition."

WEAK KIDNEYS

There are over one hundred diseases of the kidneys. Each disease requires special treatment, diet and hygiene. No one remedy can cure all these various diseases. Each case demands particular treatment, and that is why the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y., has had such a success in curing kidney disease in its various phases.

The Physicians and Surgeons employed in this completely equipped Sanitarium are among the most experienced and skillful in the country, men who have made these diseases their life study, and whose highest ambition is to excel in their treatment. How well they have succeeded may be judged from the fact that their practice embraces cases from every state and territory of the Union, as well as from foreign lands. Many thousands are annually treated either through correspondence or at this institution, founded by Dr. R. V. Pierce many years ago. It's an old adage that "Experience makes perfect," and the skilled specialist in this field of practice cures thousands of cases which have been abandoned as incurable by general practitioners.

A chemical and microscopical test of the water from the human body will tell whether the kidneys are in good health or not. These tests of health are conducted by expert physicians and chemists every day at this institution. Such examinations are made without charge. All you have to do is to send a sample by express to the Invalids' Hotel, at the same time write a letter and you will promptly receive the result of the analysis and this absolutely without charge. Stone in the bladder is cured without the use of the knife. So are rupture and false rupture cured without the use of dangerous anesthetics and without pain. In these cases the saving in time is also of importance, patients are not confined to their bed for ten or twenty days but make a satisfactory recovery and return home in a week or ten days. Send for free booklet on any one of these diseases. These booklets also contain testimonials of thousands of cases permanently cured by Dr. Pierce's improved methods.

One of the most wonderful electrical appliances is the X-ray used at the institution which may be used both in the treatment of various diseases and in the diagnosis of many obscure conditions. With its aid the interior of the human body is no longer the sealed book it has been heretofore. Abnormal states of the lungs, gall stones, stone in the bladder or in the kidneys, are shown plainly by what are known as X-ray photographs. Internal tumors, and the enlargement of the deep-seated organs, are also discovered by this means and in the diagnosis of tuberculosis of the lungs this agent has proven a most valuable aid. When applied to some of the less fatal chronic ailments of germ origin it has proven very effective as a curative agent.

Another interesting proceeding is the violet-ray treatment produced by concentrating the violet or chemical rays from an arc light with a specially prepared carbon upon any portion of the body that may be the seat of pain. Sufferers from neuralgia, sciatica, rheumatism, strains, sprains, also from those obscure exhausting pains (the origin of which cannot at times be accurately determined) frequently find immediate relief from a single treatment and usually with a little persistence in the use of this aid, comfortable health or perfect recovery is obtained.

The incandescent light bath, consisting of a cabinet in which the patient is bathed in the combined rays of a powerful electric light globe, has produced really wonderful results in diabetes, sciatica, rheumatism, obesity, anemia, and some forms of kidney and heart trouble. It has also proven valuable in chronic bronchitis, bronchial asthma and various skin diseases. As a general hygienic measure its efficiency can scarcely be over-estimated.

Those who have been patients at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, in Buffalo, N. Y., highly commend this wonderfully equipped Sanitarium, where the above mentioned electric machines, high-frequency current, and other most modern and up-to-date apparatus are used for the cure of chronic diseases. The treatment of the chronic diseases that are peculiar to women have for many years been a large factor in the cures effected at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute.

This remedial home as established by Dr. Pierce is supplied with every known apparatus and means of cure, for its aim is to avoid surgical operations whenever possible.

Great care is exercised not to over-encourage those who consult the specialist of this institution that no false hopes may be raised.

Many thousands are annually treated both through correspondence and at this Institute. Every one consulting by letter or in person receives the most careful and considerate attention. All communications are treated as strictly confidential. No charge whatever is made for consultation.
